Live Music & Silent Film Events
Buster Keaton’s Seven Chances & Yasujiro Ozu’s Dragnet Girl

Cornell Cinema launches its Spring season with Peter Bogdanovich’s new documentary The Great Buster: A Celebration (January 22 & 23), offering an excellent overview of an all-time favorite, Buster Keaton. The film is filled with clips from Keaton’s many films, including Seven Chances, which will be screened in its entirety in a new digital restoration with live accompaniment by silent film pianist Philip Carli, one of the best in the biz, on February 23 at 2pm, for the low prices of $7 adults/$5 kids 12 & under. In what’s considered one of Keaton’s best, Buster gets word that if he can be married by seven o’clock that evening he will inherit a fortune. When his sweetheart refuses, he proposes to everyone in skirts, including a Scotsman. Hopeful still, he advertises for a bride and is horrified to discover 500 would-be brides hot on his trail in a hilarious chase to the finish. Later in the semester, Cornell Cinema will welcome back the electronic/ambient musical group Coupler, who previously performed with the German silent Our Heavenly Bodies. They’ll perform their new score for Yasujiro Ozu’s Dragnet Girl on April 10 at 7:30pm. This formally accomplished and psychologically complex gangster tale pivots on the growing attraction between Joji, a hardened career criminal, and Kazuko, the sweet-natured older sister of a newly initiated young hoodlum—a relationship that provokes the jealousy of Joji’s otherwise patient moll, Tokiko. With effortlessly cool performances and visual inventiveness, Dragnet Girl is a bravura work from a young Ozu, a master of Japanese cinema, and will be accompanied by Coupler. Founded in 2012 by Lambchop veteran Ryan Norris, the group’s core is Norris along with Rodrigo Avendaño and Rollum Haas. “Much like Lambchop, Norris is making music that mixes a number of styles without ever really sounding like any of them...full of intriguing arrangements and process-based developments that are impossible to ignore.” (Tiny Mix Tapes) Tickets for this event will be $12 general/$9 students & seniors in advance, and $15 general/$12 students & seniors at the door. Advance ticket sales for both events will be available at CornellCinemaTickets.com as of January 22. Both events are cosponsored with the Cornell Council for the Arts; Dragnet Girl is additionally cosponsored with the East Asia Program.

Special Guest Presentations with Cornell Connections

Two of the likely Best Picture Oscar nominees screening at Cornell Cinema this semester—Barry Jenkins’ If Beale Street Could Talk & Yorgos Lanthimos’ The Favourite—will be shown with associated special guest presentations, both with Cornell connections! Cornell student Dominique Thorne ’19 will speak in conjunction with the March 14 screening of If Beale Street Could Talk, in which she plays the role of Sheila Hunt, sister to the main character Alonzo ‘Fonny’ Hunt (Stephan James). A week later we’ll be joined (via Skype) by David Greenbaum ’98, who is Co-Head of Production at Fox Searchlight Pictures and oversaw the production of The Favourite. Greenbaum has shepherded award-winning films that include Guillermo Del Toro’s The Shape of Water, for which he won an Oscar; Three Billboards Outside Ebbing, Missouri; and Isle of Dogs among others. One of his favorite mentors when he was a student, retired Senior Lecturer Lynda Bogel (English), will engage David in conversation about his career and The Favourite in a free event on Thursday, March 21 at 5:15pm in Willard Straight Theatre.

Cine City Walks
Featuring Four Ithaca Premieres

To really get to know a city, sometimes you have to get outside and walk around its neighborhoods. Lace up your walking shoes and get your steps in with these four films, which all hit the pavement in their own ways. Walk down every street in the five boroughs of New York City (all 8,000 miles of them) with Matt Green, subject of the new documentary The World Before Your Feet. Join Sister Marie Arné and Sister Mary Campion of Inquiring Nuns as they walk the streets of 1968 Chicago, asking passersby the question, “Are you happy?” Take a three-dimensional walk down memory lane of the neon-bathed nightlife in Kaili, China in Bi Gan’s epic Long Day’s Journey into Night. And in Walking on Water, follow internationally renowned environmental artist Christo, as he completes a long-in-the-works project to create a floating pedestrian walkway on a lake at the foot of the Italian Alps.

Painters’ Lives Through Time
Featuring Two Classic Film Restorations

From a fifteenth-century Russian icon painter to a leading figure in the abstract art movement, the four films in this series explore the lives of some of the leading figures of art history. Andrei Tarkovsky’s second feature Andrei Rublev is a masterpiece of filmmaking, following the painter through the harsh realities of medieval Russian life, vividly conjuring the conditions under which Rublev’s work was made. Julian Schnabel, an accomplished visual artist in his own right, directs Willem Dafoe in the new Vincent van Gogh biopic At Eternity’s Gate. With The Mystery of Picasso, director Henri-Georges Clouzot and Pablo Picasso collaborate to make what is arguably the greatest film about art yet made. The two devised an innovative technique whereby the filmmaker placed his camera behind a semi-transparent surface on which Picasso drew with special inks that transforms the cinema screen into Picasso’s canvas! In Never Look Away, the life of Gerhard Richter is the inspiration for this epic tale of a young German artist who struggles to reconcile his personal ambitions with his country’s politics.
The film, from the maker of The Lives of Others, is one of nine films shortlisted for Best Foreign Language Film Oscar. Both Andrei Rublev and The Mystery of Picasso will be shown in digital restorations. Cosponsored with the Dept of History of Art & Visual Studies.

Ithaca College Filmmakers
With in-person presentations by media artists

This series pays tribute to just some of the amazing work being produced by mediamakers from Cornell Cinema’s South Hill counterpart. Assistant Professor Marlena Grzaslewicz (Department of Media Arts, Sciences, and Studies, MASS) is an Emmy-winning (Outstanding Sound Editing for Nonfiction Programming for The War, 2007) sound editor and graduate of the Lodz Film School of Poland. One of her latest credits, in a long list of them, is Supervising Sound Editor on the documentary Love, Gilda, about comedian Gilda Radner. It will be preceded by the short documentary The Women of Titmouse Animation, which will be presented in person by filmmaker and Assistant Professor (MASS) Chrissy Guest. Associate Professor Cathy Crane (MASS), a 2013 recipient of a Guggenheim Fellowship in Film-Video, will be on hand to present her first feature-length film, The Manhattan Front, that was produced with the assistance of Ithaca College students. The film is a musical melodrama about labor activists in New York City at the start of WWI. Ithaca College alum Ashley Connor, a graduate of the Cinema & Photography Program, has been racking up an impressive list of cinematographer credits on some of the hottest indie films of the past several years, including The Miseducation of Cameron Post, and she’ll be here to talk about her work on Madeline’s Madeline, which has been nominated for an Indie Spirit Award for Best Cinematography (as well as Best Female Lead). Another graduate of the Cinema & Photography Program, Michael Robinson, is an acclaimed film, video and collage artist whose work has been featured at prominent festivals around the globe. He was named one of the "Best 50 Filmmakers Under 50" by Cinema Scope magazine in 2012, and he has previously presented programs of his work at Cornell Cinema. One of his latest short videos, Onward Lossless Follows, will be shown as part of the program Online/On Land: Recent Experimental Shorts.

The Hate U Give
Featuring a Cornell Faculty Panel Discussion led by Dehanza Rogers (PMA)
Wednesday, Feb 6 at 6:45pm

George Tillman Jr.’s acclaimed adaptation of Angie Thomas’ young-adult best-seller, The Hate U Give, tells the story of Starr, a black high school teenager, who must manage the divide between her mostly white prep school and her home in a struggling black working-class neighborhood. That struggle becomes much more complex when her friend Khalil is shot dead by a white police officer. According to the San Francisco Chronicle, the film “is a life-affirming rebuttal to apathy, despair and surrender. It’s also one of the year’s most important films.” Assistant Professor Dehanza Rogers (PMA) is a filmmaker whose work focuses on the intersections of race, gender, and identity, and she will lead a faculty panel discussion following the screening. Rogers is currently a Society for the Humanities Fellow where she is teaching the seminar “Viewing Black Girlhood,” an exploration of the narratives of Black girlhood in contemporary media and popular culture. The course will also deal with the dearth of existing narratives around Black girlhood and the complexities of their lived experiences in education, sexuality, and interaction with authority. The film only will be repeated on Friday, February 8 at 9:15pm. Cosponsored with the Society for the Humanities and the Africana Studies and Research Center.

Experimental Lens

Featuring the Ithaca premiere of Jean-Luc Godard’s latest film, The Image Book

Cornell Cinema has been proudly presenting artist films and experimental cinema since its inception, often with filmmakers visiting to discuss their work. Cornell Cinema is lucky to share a bumper crop of experimental films and visiting filmmakers this semester, beginning with the new film by Jean-Luc Godard, The Image Book. Godard’s most recent collage won the first-ever Special Palme d’Or at the Cannes Film Festival, and it’s an encyclopedic rendering of cinema and its history, processed in search of a means to understand the last century. Another new film, Prototype, takes a decidedly Godardian approach to technology and media and expands it along the z-axis for an enthralling 3D experience. Filmmaker Jason Livingston’s ‘94 work is in consideration of public spaces, both physical and digital, and he will be here in person to present a selection of his videos, remixed and revisited with Songs of Inexperience. Vincent Grenier presents a survey of his work from the 1970s to the present, showcasing his painterly eye for the everyday in Material Incidents. Visual and performance artist Maura Brewer comes to Cornell Cinema to present Jessica: Video & Live Performance, a collection of her performance and video work that examines how consumer culture, including mass media and fashion, constructs female subjects. Ecuadorian filmmaker and 2018 Guggenheim Fellow Alexandra Cuesta also visits with her feature-length project Territorio, a portrait film of the people of Ecuador, framed by the travel journals of avant-garde poet Henri Michaux. Finally, Cornell Cinema gathers a survey of recent experimental work with Online/On Land, observing the dissonance generated between landscapes and the humans who may physically or virtually inhabit them. Cosponsored with the Cornell Council for the Arts.

Contemporary World Cinema

Featuring five Ithaca Premieres & five films shortlisted for Best Foreign Language Film Oscar

Cornell Cinema regularly features the best of world cinema, and this Spring offers a particularly rich slate of titles, including five Ithaca Premieres, little known gems from the film festival circuit that would otherwise not screen in Ithaca. The series also offers a second chance to see some of the season’s most celebrated foreign titles after they’ve had a run at Cinemapolis, which is the case for the first two films in the line-up: Sweden’s Border is an audacious dark fairy tale about a customs guard who has the ability to sniff out fear, and South
Korea’s Burning, a mysterious thriller wrapped around a fatal triangle from acclaimed director Lee Chang-dong. Ithaca premieres include I am Not a Witch, a UK production set in Zambia, which blends deadpan humor with light surrealism to tell a fable-like story about a young African girl banished from her village for alleged witchcraft; The Wild Pear Tree, a visually stunning work from noted Turkish director Nuri Bilge Ceylan, about an aspiring writer who returns to his native village and must come to terms with his childhood home and his family’s estranged patriarch; Rafiki, a buoyant love story between two young women, set in Nairobi, Kenya, a country that criminalizes homosexuality; and Ruben Brandt, Collector, an animated Hungarian feature about a famous psychotherapist who is forced to steal paintings from the world's renowned museums as a result of subliminal messaging he received as a child. Japanese director Hirokazu Kore-eda’s Shoplifters, about a family of small-time crooks, won the Palme d’Or at last year’s Cannes Film Festival, and Academy Award-winning Polish director Paweł Pawlikowski follows up his box-office sensation Ida with Cold War, a bittersweet, exquisitely crafted tale of a tempestuous love between a pianist and a singer as they navigate the realities of living both in and outside the Iron Curtain. It was named Best Foreign Language Film of 2018 by the New York Film Critics Circle. Colombian director Ciro Guerra’s follow-up to his Oscar-nominated Embrace of the Serpent, Birds of Passage, details the rise of the Colombian drug trade in a sprawling epic about the erosion of tradition in pursuit of material wealth. And from another Academy Award-winning director, Florian Henckel von Donnersmarck (The Lives of Others), comes Never Look Away, a riveting story loosely based on the life of renowned German visual artist Gerhard Richter. With the exception of Long Day’s Journey into Night, Chinese director Bi Gan’s follow-up to the acclaimed Kaili Blues, Rafiki & Ruben Brandt, all the films were their countries submissions for Best Foreign Language Film Oscar consideration, with all but Border landing a coveted spot on the shortlist of nine titles.

Doc Spots
Featuring Five Ithaca Premieres

In addition to the documentaries included in other series, these five terrific – and diverse - films (all of which are Ithaca premieres) will also screen at Cornell Cinema. What better way to start the semester than The Great Buster: A Celebration by Peter Bogdanovich, which includes a treasure trove of stunningly restored film clips from the Cohen Film Classics library. Photographer RaMell Ross’s first feature, Hale County This Morning, This Evening, is an impressionistic ‘documentary’ look at the lives of two young Black men (Daniel Collins and Quincy Bryant) and their rural Alabama home and its culture over five years. Winner of the Gotham Award for Best Documentary of 2018 and one of fifteen films shortlisted for Best Documentary Feature Oscar, this one’s a must-see. Mila Turajlić’s The Other Side of Everything explores the secrets behind a locked door in her childhood.
home in Belgrade and expands into a portrait of her mother, the dynamic activist and scholar Srbijanka Turajlić, who was a beacon during great political turmoil in her country. Filmmaker Robert Greene radically combines collaborative documentary, western and musical elements to explore the long-buried history of the deportation of nearly 2000 immigrant miners from Bisbee, Arizona in 1917 in Bisbee ’17, offered for free as part of the course “Imagining Migration in Film & Literature.” Finally, Cornell Cinema plays host to a free screening of The Human Element, with renowned photographer James Balog on hand to discuss his latest film about climate change, as this semester’s Atkinson Forum in American Studies event.

International Students Union Foreign Favorites Festival

With the active participation of the International Students Union on campus, an umbrella group and funding source for international and ethnic associations at Cornell University for over 20 years, Cornell Cinema has assembled a series of some of the most popular foreign films produced over the best several decades, including a Valentine’s Day screening of Jean-Pierre Jeunet’s charm-filled Amélie, and a new digital restoration of the Japanese anime film Perfect Blue by Satoshi Kon. Naturally, the series also includes Giuseppe Tornatore’s perennial favorite Cinema Paradiso, and Marjane Satrapi’s Persepolis, based on her graphic novel. Rounding out the series is the recent Wild Tales from Argentinian director Damian Szifron, a black comedy full of quirky short films. It was nominated for the Best Foreign Language Film at the 87th Academy Awards. Even if you’ve already seen these films, they all warrant repeat viewing!

Japanese Anime

Cornell Cinema presents a small series surveying Japan’s leading animation studios, as well as a 20th anniversary re-release of the groundbreaking debut film by director Satoshi Kon, Perfect Blue. The new documentary Never-Ending Man: Hayao Miyazaki observes the head of Studio Ghibli as he slowly draws himself out of retirement, inspired by the cutting-edge computer graphics young animators are working with. Founded by several former Studio Ghibli animators, Studio Ponoc made a splash last year with Mary and the Witch’s Flower, and the short films included in Modest Heroes: Ponoc Short Films is further proof the new animation studio is one to watch. With Mirai, Studio Chizu has crafted a dazzling tale of a young boy whose initial jealously over his newborn sister leads him on a generations-spanning trip through time and space.

The Complete Jean Vigo
Featuring the definitive restoration of L'Atalante

Even among cinema’s legends, Jean Vigo stands apart. The son of a notorious anarchist, Vigo had a brief but brilliant career making poetic, lightly surrealist films before his life was tragically cut short by tuberculosis at age 29. Like the daring early works of his contemporaries Jean Cocteau and Luis Buñuel, Vigo’s films refused to play by the rules. The five films in this series comprise the entirety of Jean Vigo’s cinematic output (about four hours total): three short films (Zero for Conduct, À propos de Nice & Taris), one feature (L'Atalante), and a collection of outtakes and rushes (Tournage d'Hiver). Each one of these films is a canonical work of art in its own right, but together, they signify the work of someone who had fully mastered the art of cinema before reaching thirty.

Tournage d'Hiver, in particular, proves to be an enlightening experience, as its assemblage of outtakes from L'Atalante and Zero for Conduct is given shape by French film critic Bernard Einsenschitz, supervisor of the definitive new L'Atalante restoration. The film tells the story of a captain on the river barge, the L'Atalante, and his new bride, which in Vigo’s hands becomes “a sublime depiction of love, erotic attraction, friendship and the mysteries of daily life.” (Kristin M. Jones, The Wall Street Journal) Vigo is perhaps most well-known for Zero for Conduct (1933), a surreal satire in which students stage an uprising at a sinister boarding school. The portrayal of youthful rebellion, which was banned in France until 1945, influenced many filmmakers, including François Truffaut’s The 400 Blows (1959) and Lindsay Anderson’s If…. (1968). À propos de Nice (1930), “a witty, subversive, visually dynamic city portrait, bears affinities to Soviet films such as Man With a Movie Camera (1929) by Dziga Vertov …. [and] Taris (1931), an exuberant tribute to a champion swimmer—commissioned by Germaine Dulac—ends with Taris, wearing a coat and bowler hat, seeming to walk away on water.” All of Vigo’s films were shot by the talented cinematographer Boris Kaufman, the brother of Dziga Vertov, who went on to win an Oscar for his work on Elia Kazan’s On the Waterfront (1954). Cosponsored with the French Studies Program and the Society for the Humanities.

Visiting Filmmakers
Featuring 8 in-person presentations

In addition to visiting filmmakers described in other series (primarily Experimental Lens), Cornell Cinema will host filmmakers whose visits have been arranged by other programs on campus. The Jewish Studies Program brings the filmmakers of Bogdan’s Journey, about a Catholic Pole who launches a crusade to reconcile Poles and Jews over a massacre that happened in Poland in 1946. The Elephant Listening Project, part of the Lab of Ornithology, brings filmmaker Todd McGrain (who used to teach in Cornell’s Dept of Art) to present Elephant Path/Njai Njoku, a documentary set in the Central African Rainforest about elephant behavioral biologist, Andrea Turkalo, and indigenous tracker, Sessely Bernard, who have committed their lives to study and protect the elephants there. And the South Asia Program will bring Anand Patwardhan, whose passionate, detailed chronicling of injustices in India has made him the filmmaking conscience of his nation. His latest, Reason, is divided into eight-chapters and “sets out to chart what he sees as India’s slide away from the complex tumult of a secular democracy towards hardening divisions of power, caste, and religious belief—lines that are enforced increasingly by violence.” (Toronto International Film Festival) The dates of his visit are subject to change. These three events will be offered free of charge.

Art Docs
Featuring Two Ithaca Premieres

Subtitled The Life and Art of Yayoi Kusama, the recent documentary Kusama - Infinity explores the decades-long career of the top-selling female artist in the world, now near 90, who has overcome extensive obstacles, including mental illness, to pursue her creative ambitions, which span the disciplines of painting, sculpture, installation art, performance art, poetry and literary fiction. In Walking On Water, Bulgarian director Andrey Paounov follows internationally renowned environmental artist Christo on his quest to realize the mammoth and logistically complex installation, The Floating Piers, on Italy's Lake Iseo, seven years after the death of Christo's collaborator wife, Jeanne-Claude. The film offers an illuminating portrait of a master artist and the arduous business of bringing an ambitious work to life. The series is cosponsored with the Dept of Art.

This semi-annual festival features high quality children’s programs on Saturdays at 2pm in the beautiful Willard Straight Theatre, most offered for just $5 adults/$4 kids 12 & younger. (Seven Chances will be $7 adults/$5 kids 12 & under). Parents of budding scientists will want to bring their charges to Science Fair, a fun documentary that follows nine high school students from around the globe as they navigate rivalries and setbacks on their journey to compete at The International Science and Engineering Fair. Fans of Japanese animation—adults & children alike—will be delighted with two programs: Modest Heroes: Ponoc Short Films and Mirai, a sweet-natured gem about a young boy's jealousy of his newborn sister. Everyone will enjoy a special screening of a new restoration of Buster Keaton’s hilarious silent comedy Seven Chances, about a shy bachelor who must marry immediately in order to gain a rich inheritance. The film will be accompanied by silent film pianist Philip Carli, whose fun and lively playing will perfectly compliment the shenanigans. The series will conclude with the recent musical, Mary Poppins Returns. Age recommendations can be found on Cornell Cinema’s website. Cosponsored with the Ithaca Youth Bureau.

Women/Film: Past/Present
Featuring an in-person presentation by Indie Producer Christine Vachon

As women continue to breakdown barriers in the film industry, Cornell Cinema offers an eclectic group of films and in person presentations that explore female pioneers who are finally getting their due, and new voices who are shaking things up in their respective fields. Chrissy Guest is an assistant professor at Ithaca College and her research centers on the career trajectories of women in the animation field. Her in-progress documentary Beyond Ink & Paint: The Women of Animation examines the studio culture surrounding women working in the animation industry beginning in 1970, and she’ll present her recently completed segment The Women of Titmouse Animation, a contemporary animation studio. The field of cinematography has also been dominated by men, but Ithaca College graduate Ashley Connor is changing that with her innovative work that has garnered significant attention, including from the New Yorker’s film critic, Richard Brody, who praised her work in Josephine Decker’s Madeline’s Madeline. Video and performance artist Maura Brewer’s work examines how consumer culture, including mass media and fashion, constructs female subjects, and she’ll deconstruct actress Jessica Chastain—in the role women have traditionally played in Hollywood—in her live presentation. Groundbreaking indie producer Christine Vachon, who co-founded Killer Films in 1995, will be here to present one of her latest films, Colette. Vachon is an Independent Spirit Award-winning producer, who has been lauded for her career filmmaking with the Producer Award from the Gotham Independent Film Awards. She is perhaps best known for her long-standing collaboration with filmmaker Todd Haynes. She’ll engage in conversation with Assoc Professor/Filmmaker Cathy Crane from Ithaca College, a cosponsor of the event. Stepping further back in time, the series includes the new documentary Be Natural: The Untold Story of Alice Guy-Blaché, about a woman who was at the forefront of filmmaking during its earliest days, and made over 1000 films. Guy-Blaché was one of the first to suggest that the new medium could be used to tell fictional narratives. The series concludes with the recent digital restoration of a neglected masterpiece of American independent cinema, Wanda, a hard-luck drama about a woman living amid the soot-choked Pennsylvania landscape. The sole feature film directed by and starring actress Barbara Loden has influenced countless filmmakers over the years.

Middle Eastern Cinema

Featuring two Ithaca Premieres & faculty introductions

In conjunction with Associate Professor Deborah Starr’s (Near Eastern Studies) course, “Middle Eastern Cinema,” Cornell Cinema presents three contemporary films directed by women. In Between, by Maysaloun Hamoud, invites viewers into the lives of three independent Palestinian women who share an apartment in Tel Aviv and must navigate between tradition and modernity. The Israeli film Working Woman is a timely story of sexual harassment in the workplace, expertly told by long time feminist filmmaker Michal Aviad. And Nadine Labaki’s social-realistic and poignant Capernaum (Chaos) follows a young boy who struggles to survive in the slums and streets of Beirut and seeks to sue his parents for bringing him into the world. Winner of the Jury Prize at last year’s Cannes Film Festival, Capernaum is Lebanon’s submission for Best Foreign Language Film Oscar, and one of nine films shortlisted for the award. Professor Starr will introduce the first two films. Cosponsored with the Department of Near Eastern Studies & the Jewish Studies Program.

3D Showcase

A selection of films shown in digital 3D for 2D prices!

Cornell Cinema installed a new Dolby 3D projection system in 2017 (thanks to crowdfunding and a grant from the New York State Council on the Arts), and screened several excellent movies last year that allowed audiences to experience what a high-quality 3D system can do. That inaugural series barely scratched the surface of available titles, though, so Cornell Cinema returns with another short series of 3D films. Patrons will be wowed by the 3D presentation (that far surpasses what one finds at the multiplex), and won’t have to pay one extra dime for the thrill; regular ticket prices will apply! The three films in this series show that 3D cinematography is still being employed to creative effect, and that its artistic applications are just beginning to be explored. The experimental quasi-documentary Prototype uses 3D to layer decades of technological history on top of a contemplation of the aftermath of the deadliest natural disaster in US history—the hurricane that hit Galveston, Texas in 1900—while Spider-Man: Into the Spider-Verse mixes various animation techniques for a unique 3D experience. experience. Bi Gan’s rapturous Long Day’s Journey into Night features at its center a single, hour-long 3D sequence that is not only a gravity-defying technical marvel, but also a dreamlike promenade through the neon-drenched streets of Kaili, China.
